The Angel Who Saved the Meeting

By Chantal Klingbeil

Many years ago, hundreds of people crowded into a Latin school in the capital city of Norway. They came to listen to the preacher from America who was preaching such strange new doctrines about Jesus’ soon coming. Pastor John Matteson was very surprised to see the place bursting at its seams. As he got up to speak, he soon realized that not all of the people who had come were there to listen. Some just wanted to shout and interrupt his sermon, while others wanted to cause a riot.

In the middle of the sermon, a well-known minister stood up and started shouting insults at John. Some of his supporters cheered him on, while others started to hiss. Excitement swept through the audience like a wave through a stormy sea. John realized that they were in trouble.

There were so many people, crowded into such a small space, that things could quickly turn tragic. Only three years before, in a public meeting, people had gotten so worked up that many were trampled to death trying to reach the door. Two men had already picked up their chairs and started towards a window to smash their way out.

“God, please help us,” John whispered. At that very moment, a tall man stood up in the balcony of the hall and, in a very loud voice that could be heard above all the shouting, ordered everyone to be quiet immediately. The strangest thing happened. Everyone sat down and was quiet. One could hear a pin drop. John closed the meeting with prayer.

In the foyer, people crowded around the book table to buy literature. John asked one of the ushers, who had been standing at the back, to please bring the tall stranger to him. John wanted to thank him for his help. Within minutes the usher was back. No one had seen the tall stranger leave—and yet, he was nowhere to be found. John realized that, once again, God had sent His angel to help His servant, in answer to prayer. We don’t often see them, but sometimes they can be tall strangers.
